Background Information

Following Britain's defeat of France in the French and Indian War, King George III and the British government set to the task of keeping and controlling the American colonies. Debt from the war and the costs of maintaining troops in the colonies were high. New British policies and taxes related to those costs angered the American colonists and led to a variety of protests. This lesson presents letters and other writings on the issues that were dividing Britain and its American colonies from both points of view.

Understanding the Time and Place: The United States, 1865–1954

The civil rights reform movement of the 1950s and 1960s was a response to a long history of racial inequality in the United States. During the Reconstruction period after the Civil War (from about 1865 to 1877) Constitutional amendments gave African Americans the rights of citizenship. However, in the years following 1877, state governments denied African Americans their rights and legalized segregation and discrimination across the United States. The civil rights movement formed to protest this inequality and aimed to overturn this systemic discrimination.

Reconstruction, 1865–1877

After the Civil War, the Constitution was revised to protect the rights of African Americans through three important amendments. The Thirteenth Amendment legally ended slavery throughout the United States. The Fourteenth Amendment granted citizenship to African Americans and provided legal protections. The Fifteenth
